

Again, I received a list of seven interesting questions via email, this time from Germany. It's my habit to get rid of these email interviews immediately. Here it is. This time Jan-Peter Wulf of the Node trend watchers newsletter raised the issues of my specific blog theory, the relatively skeptical response in Germany to the whole blogging phenomena, the reluctance of German public broadcasters, and German academics, to really engage with the Internet.