

I just posted an interview with me, conducted by the German artist Juliane Stiegele, here on my pages site. It's in German and is meant for an upcoming publication on the issue of slowing down time. The book will be called Utopia Toolbox. She wrote to me: "The contributions, texts, interviews, artworks, pictures are coming from various directions: artists, philosophers, practitioners, even a clairvoyant is interviewed – as it was a habit in ancient Greece to ask the 'Theresias' before crucial action was taken. It deals with design in a most wide sense: not about how to design another wonderful chair or art object for a group of chosen people, but more about how to design the space b e t w e e n table and chair, also of course the space between people. It is made out of relentless curiosity for the future. The book will contain a lot of questions and some answers, and some do-it-yourself-performances for an instant test-scenario. A handbook to be used effectively in everyday life. A tool of encouragement."
