"The choice between the laws of the market (proprietary software) and the laws of code (collaboration) is a choice between masters. There is always a master, though some are better hidden than others. And in the area of computing, not using proprietary software means searching for new masters." Detlef Holz

Just for the fun… for more themes, please visit this page. Everyone is invited to send in more perverted theories and statements.