MoneyLab#7 Outside of Finance 14-15 November

On feminist economics, social payments, corporate crime and the “blokechain”

Symposium | Workshops | Films

The social is being monetized left, right and center. From micropayments to data trading, new money systems are becoming mainstream overnight. What remains of agency in a cashless society? While transactions are becoming digital, personal data ownership slips through users' hands. What does it mean when a tech giant like Facebook enters the scene with its Libra “currency-for-the-good”? Does the porn industry, once again, lead the way in fintech uptake?

Despite dreams of radical shifts, blockchain fantasies overflow with the same old male biases. Now that the crypto-hype has become mainstream, it is more important than ever to reassert control over the definition of money. What will be the result of the regulatory regimes striving to “civilize” fintech? How do we hijack the competition between established players and new financial elites in markets that are still caught in bubble and burst dynamics?

Since 2013, MoneyLab has explored questions around the design of money, the democratization of finance, and the new shifts in fintech. At MoneyLab #7, we'll be looking beyond the world of libertarian startups with their often masculine preoccupations. From hyperlocal cryptocurrencies at techno festivals to self-organized exchange systems in refugee communities, what are promising design strategies to counter the corporatization of money? Can we imagine a crypto economy that values care work and focuses on equity and solidarity?

Topics

Financial Hacking: Prospects from the Outside of Finance | From Dark Web Smokescreens to White-Collar Crime | Payments and the Platforms: Monetization of Social Media | Beyond the Blokechain: the Cryptofeminist Agenda | The Antennae of Finance: What's on the Radar? | AltFin: Experiments from Prototype to Pilot

Program

Stimulating panels on Thursday and Friday are followed by a wild session of workshops, project pitches and film screenings on Friday afternoon. After this, the MoneyLab General Assembly will gather for the first time to discuss the future of the network. By then we will be in serious need to let go a bit, so we will go to our final destination: the Pumpin' and Dumpin' after party!
